The diagram illustrates the database schema for a course management system. It includes the following tables and their attributes:

- courses: id (integer), title (varchar NN), description (varchar), price (integer), currency (varchar), stars (double), teacher_id (integer).
- categories: id (integer), name (varchar NN).
- course_images: id (integer), course_id (integer).
- images: id (integer).
- teachers: id (integer), rating (double).
- course_review: comment_id (integer), course_id (integer), stars (integer).
- comments: id (integer), content (varchar NN), create_at (timestamp), student_id (integer).
- students: id (integer).

Relationships are indicated by arrows: courses to categories, course_images, teachers, course_review, and students; categories to course_images; images to course_images; course_images to course_review; course_review to comments; and comments to students.
